CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS

Critical Theory and Social Justice: Journal of Undergraduate Research is accepting academic manuscripts for its Fall 2017 issue. For this issue, CTSJ is seeking papers of any discipline or topical focus; to be considered, the papers must be of high quality and at least 12 pages in length (15 pages or more is preferred). To be considered for publication, the article must have been written prior to the author’s matriculation into graduate school.

Published by the Critical Theory and Social Justice Department at Occidental College, the journal exposes students to the experiences of writing, editing, and publishing scholarly work. For further information on Critical Theory and Social Justice: Journal of Undergraduate Research’s publishing procedures, please refer to our website here: http://scholar.oxy.edu/ctsj/. Please email all submissions to elmer@oxy.edu.

Articles, Essays, and Reviews

CTSJ welcomes original research articles, essays, and reviews from students of all disciplines. Work selected for publication will display compelling and in-depth analysis, academic excellence, and significant relevance to the mission of the journal. Accepted work will be published in CTSJ’s semi-annual online volumes. All submissions must integrate and apply critical theory to issues of social justice.

Artwork

CTSJ strives to publish artists whose work pushes the boundaries of its medium to offer critical insights into issues of social justice. Artists may submit single pieces or a series; a series may not be longer than 7 pages, however exceptions may be considered depending upon circumstances to be decided on a case-by-case basis.

The medium of art is not limited, but all works must be able to be reproduced in print. The piece(s) should be electronically submitted; we cannot accept physical copies of any artwork.

An artist statement that will be published with the piece must accompany each submission. This should be a single-spaced article, at least two pages long. Typically, statements provide context for and analysis of the work in a form that is consistent with our long-form articles.
Critical Theory & Social Justice
Journal of undergraduate research

- Foucault-

Occidental College